REPUBLICAN COUNTY TICKET WINS

Adams Leads Field in Race for Sheriff With Murphy the Third Man

Brown Far Ahead of John Robinson for District Attorneyship.

MILLER TRAILS RUSE

Returns in the county election Tuesday tabulated at 2.30 o'clock this afternoon do not greatly change the complexion of the early figures indicating a clean sweep by the Republicans

Eighty-three precincts out of 167 gave John Q. Adams for sheriff a margin of 2,071 over John J. Hogsett Democrat with Peter M. Murphy third man

For district attorney B. D. Brown 53 precincts had 1,425 more than John I. Robinson

Apparently the closest contest was between Edgar W. Powell and F. J. McFarland for recorder. Powell's lead being 71 in 52 precincts

Frank Ruse in 52 precincts had 1,700 over Lyman K. Miller for register of wills

William C. Smith of Dunbar for county treasurer was over 4,000 ahead of Robert I. Sample in 52 precincts

So many tickets were split that in all parts of the county election boards worked late into the night to complete the count. In some places notably the large districts the vote was not counted until late in the forenoon In one Connellsville ward the Third and in two Uniontown wards the boards were still at work at noon

McClelland swung into the lead of Marshall for the minority membership of the board of commissioners

GOVERNOR SMITH WORSTED IN NEW YORK CONTESTS

Republicans Regain Five Seats in Assembly; Dyes Wins in New Jersey.

WASHINGTON Nov 7 Election results in off year contests in 11 states show it clearly today that neither the Republican or the Democratic parties could claim a great victory of the form shown in the last general election

The Democrats who in the last congressional election wiped out the huge Republican majorities registered in 1920 appeared today to be holding the ground gained in 1922 speaking generally. They made one notable gain when they elected Democrat governor in Kentucky a state that went Republican in the last presidential and one United States senator in 1920

Nowhere were Democratic prognostications more disappointed than there was a basis for such hope except possibly in New York where Governor Al Smith's forces hoped to capture control of the state assembly They suffered a decided setback the Republicans recapturing five seats lost last election

The Ku Klux Klan's sweeping victories in Ohio city elections caused much comment among political leaders here today Taken in connection with the Klan's defeat in Indiana it seems to point to the entrance of the Klan into state and national politics in 1924 to a degree that will embarrass many candidates

There was little indication in the scattered contests of the line up on prohibition The drys won in Nebraska apparently and the wets in Kentucky former Senator Joe Frelinghuysen to the front as the Republican leader there approaching Senator Walter Edge who has moist leanings

The wets won in Maryland as Governor Ritchie who was re elected is a highly popular governor aside from his views on prohibition

Vermont Puts Approval Stamp On Coolidge

By United Press

WASHINGTON Nov 7—The margin by which Ezra Jewett Coolidge's native state Vermont returned a Republican to the Senate to fill a vacancy left by the death of Senator Dillingham and the House vacancy caused by Peter Dalton's withdrawal as candidate was impressive enough to show that Mr Coolidge was in no danger there of the physchological reaction which the Democrats sought to instill in him by giving a county opposite the Republican candidate

The election yesterday simply will confirm opinions of both Republican and Democratic leaders for a repeat of the normal struggle While statements will be issued today from both party headquarters here claiming important gains the voting if it shows any trends, showed that 1924 is anybody's fight no anybody victory just now

Cleanse the blood, bowels and liver with Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets, the successful substitute for calomel; there's no sickness or pain after taking them.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

The degree team of the local Knights of Pythias Lodge will exemplify in dramatic form the lesson of friendship as taught in the first rank preceding the play. An excellent program, a variety of specialty acts will be rendered by some local and several visiting performers who are all artists in their respective parts. This affair is going to be a big treat for the people of Connellsville, and all are welcome to attend. The admission is free, so come and bring your families.—Advertisement—7nov-1t.

Klan Cases Dismissed.

ATLANTA, Nov. 7.—The warrants against four officials of the Ku Klux Klan were dismissed when called for hearing in Judge Hancock's court this afternoon for want of prosecution. The court said Dr. Fred Johnson who swore to the warrants had been advised to remain within the jurisdiction of the court but instead had gone to Birmingham.

Republicans Carry Johnstown.

JOHNSTOWN, Nov. 7.—Ex-mayor Louis Franke was winner in the mayoralty fight in Johnstown while the entire Republican city ticket was elected. County returns indicate a close fight for county treasurer and for district attorney. All other county offices were won by the Republicans.

Disease Cases Reported.

Virginia Backus, six years old, daughter of B. F. Backus of East Crawford avenue is ill of scarlet fever. A two year old child of Mr and Mrs. A. C Carbonori of Maple street, West Side, is ill of diphtheria. The cases have been reported to Health Officer George Herzel.

No Need of It.

"Say, stranger," said a man traveling in Kansas, "why don't they put up a sign, 'Dangerous' down here at this ford? I drove through there just now and came near getting drowned."

"Well, now, I guess everybody that goes across finds out it's dangerous, so we don't need no sign."

"I could not work at all and had to take to my bed with a high fever due to intestinal indigestion, gases in my stomach and pain in my right side. I had spent my last cent for doctors and medicine, which gave me no relief. I was in despair. A lodge brother gave me a bottle of Mayr's Wonderful Remedy, and the first dose relieved me. Thanks to this medicine I am now in the best of health." SCAR TELLS WOMAN'S AGE

Size of Vaccination Mark, Bared by Sleeveless Gowns, Shows Period of Inoculation.

Twenty years ago when the popular wave of smallpox vaccination swept the land, and when every school girl bared her arm for the medical process that necessitated a permanent scar, it is probable that neither mothers nor doctors foresaw the coming of the present-day fashions in sleeveless gowns.

Those were the days of trailing skirts, bustles, long sleeves and high feminine collars, and when the doctor inquired of the solicitous mother as to where he should put the mark upon the little girl the mother felt quite safe in choosing a position so well concealed as the upper arm.

Few mothers of those days could believe that a scar upon the arm well up toward the shoulder would ever find its way into the light of public attention, but the passing of years, with the consequent changing of styles, has brought about circumstances that were unexpected, and the marks are at last out in the open, exposed to the gaze of whoever cares to look.

Observing persons assert they have little difficulty in telling the age of a young woman merely by noting the kind and size of vaccination scar. The doctors at one time thought it necessary to make marks the size of a half dollar, but with the passing of years they became smaller and smaller until now a scratch that is almost invisible in all the process requires. The girl whose vaccination mark corresponds to the size of a dime belongs to a different period from the girl with the nickel mark, the quarter mark or the half-dollar mark, and with the donning of the sleeveless gown she feels that her age is stamped indelibly upon her.

The modern physician's system marks an advance in surgical science that will be appreciated by the debutante a decade or so hence.

WARSHIPS VISIT SWEDEN

Nation Has Been Host to Numerous Navies Recently.

Sweden has been host to more naval visitors from foreign countries during six weeks this summer than ever before within so short a period, and the people look on these courteous attentions as a sign of growing interest in the country's trade and political position in the north of Europe.

Ten countries in all have sent war vessels to Sweden, and ten different ports, including Stockholm, Gothenburg and Malmo, have been visited.

The United States cruiser Pittsburgh recently left Stockholm, where its officers participated in the memorial services for the late President Harding. The United States battleship North Dakota also was in Swedish waters this summer.

NEED FOR SUBDIVISION OF ELECTION DISTRICTS.

The extraordinary length of time required for counting the ballots in Tuesday's election emphasizes the need, particularly in Connellsville, of a re-districting of the wards for election purposes. Requiring the members of the election boards to be on duty continuously for 24 hours, or longer as occurred this year, is too great an exaction on the time and energies of these officials. Further, at the busy hours of the day voters crowd the polls and many have to stand in line for a long time before they can vote. This is an inconvenience no voter likes to suffer and rather than do so some will go away without voting and others will not take the trouble to go to the polls at all.

All these circumstances have a tendency to interfere with the satisfactory conduct of elections and to require too much time in determining the results. Delays incident to making returns frequently give rise to allegations that they are being held back for ulterior purposes and aspersions are thus sometimes unjustly cast upon members of the election boards.

As a remedy for the conditions, about which there has long been complaint, steps should be taken to have the congested districts sub-divided before another election takes place.

THE PRICE OF SAFETY.

The disaster in the mine at Beckley, W. Va., draws attention to the fact that the season of the year is here when, due to the reduction of humidity in the atmosphere, conditions exist in mines which increase the dangers from the propagation of gas explosions by means of coal dust. It also gives pertinent application to the observations of Coal Age, printed elsewhere on this page, directing attention to the use of rock dust as a means of promoting safety.

As pointed out, it is lamentable that all mine managers have not yet become fully convinced of the fact so conclusively proven by tests by the Bureau of Mines, and by many unfortunate accidents, that coal dust is explosive, but they still persist in the delusion that because they have never had a disaster of this kind, their mines are entirely safe.

Means for moistening coal dust are as effective as rock dust in neutralizing the dangers of dry coal dust and are employed in many of the more carefully managed mines. This practice largely obtains in the mines of the Connellsville region where, with a few exceptions among the smaller operations, no precaution to insure safety is overlooked. That the region has enjoyed comparative immunity from explosions over a long period is the best proof that can be given of the intelligent care of those in charge of mines to reduce or eliminate hazards. The record thus established ought to convince mine managers in other fields that constant vigilance is the price of safety.

The Permanence Of Radio

Radio is here to stay.

There is no longer any doubt about its permanence as a utility, nor is there likely to be any radical change or new discovery in connection with it which will affect it fundamentally.

The history of other inventions, as well as experience in the field of radio to date, indicates this to be a fact.

Two years ago when radio first became known to the man on the street there was a general belief among laymen that some new idea would soon come out and upset all the principles previously discovered in this new art of communication. But nothing of the kind has happened, and in this respect radio is repeating the history of other inventions.

The telephone for example. The telephone is fundamentally the same today as the first model which Alexander Graham Bell produced. Likewise the principle of the steam engine is the same now as when Robert Fulton made the first steamboat. Hardly ever has a great invention later undergone a fundamental change in the principles underlying it. Obsolescence comes in styles, but not in principles. Refinements are made, costs cut, and parts made simpler and more rugged, but no revolutionary change occurs.

The same is true of radio. Circuits that gave good results two years ago give good results now, although simpler circuits have been developed, using fewer controls.

It is a fact that the public is now buying higher grade parts than they were a year or two ago, but they are still buying well known, tried and true brands.

Five years ago a certain small concern produced an amplifying transformer which was the first offered for general sale to the public. Today that transformer is identical with the one first produced, and its efficiency as well as its slogan have become famous. This manufacturer has developed the so-called reflex circuit to a point where anyone can put together a set which will bring in broadcasting stations within a thousand mile radius and do so on a loud speaker.

Models and styles change, but not fundamental principles.

The pessimists who predicted the failure of radio will have to find something new to worry about. Take anybody with a good set and try and get it away from him, or shake his faith in radio. Try and do it!

Ask the radio fan—he knows!

A Little Stone Dust And Safety

Coal Age.

In common estimation no mine is unsafe unless it has gas and has had an explosion. Coal dust looks as harmless as powder—and it is. It is remarkable with what confidence the man who knew the qualities of neither would view them both. They are both heavily fraught with mischief, but both look harmless enough. Strange also it is how proof and experience leave the average man blind to the dangers of coal dust. He is confident that what happened in Johnson's mine will never happen at his.

When something frightful does happen, when the women gather around the drift mouth or shaft and a hurried call goes over the wire for rescue men, he still declares that no one in reason would have expected anything like that at his mine. Meantime powdered coal, an explosive mixture, lay on the floor and the ribs of the mine. It looked harmless enough until it exploded.

And yet a little powdered shale dust on shelves, on the floor and ribs, or better yet in a stone-dust barrier would have prevented or at least shortened the travel of the blast. Such a simple remedy, that needs only occasional renewal, that is not like water cut off by freezing or the breaking of a pipe, and that does not fail because some underling overlooked some hazardous corner or misjudged the quantity to use; such a simple, readily installed remedy is passed over largely because it is so simple and unimpressive.

Rock dust has the advantage that it can be seen. No superintendent can fail to note if it is present. The use of it does not injure the roof, does not interfere with ventilation, does not involve a heavy charge for piping and pumping or for the maintenance of steam, does not becloud roadways or rot timber. It is useful in the West, where aridity and water scarcity make moistening prohibitively expensive. Yet in how few places is it used! Europe has ordered its application by law and regulation and has availed itself of it. But the United States still lags behind, despite all that has been done to inform the mining public of its value.

Unfortunate is it that the use of it has never been patented and put on the market. Rock dust is too cheap. We can all make it and use it. If it had only been commercialized and advertised, if permission to use it had been sold by traveling men and advocated by a corps of engineer salesmen, it would now be extensively used. As it is, it probably is utilized nowhere but at those mines where disaster has proved in some dire way that the coal dust at that mine is dangerous. Must we have explosions in every mine to make every operator realize that all the bituminous and lignite mines are dangerous and that a few of the semi-anthracite mines might be if the right opportunity were present?

Winter is coming. Surely now is the time to make sure that the mine which has never yet exploded never shall.

Short Talks on Advertising

Copyrighted By Charles Austin Bates: New York 1923

NO. 7—GOOD WILL.

Among Henry Ford's half billion dollar assets, as shown by a recent financial statement, are $280,000,000 cash and $20,000,000 "good will."

Take away the cash and leave the plants and good will and before long there would be accumulated another quarter of a billion cash. But wipe out the good will, leaving plants and cash and nobody could estimate the effect of the disaster.

Old Polonius was right: "Who steals my purse steals trash—but he who filches me of my good name, steals that which not enriches him, but leaves me poor indeed."

Good will is the result of two things: (1) good service and (2) good advertising. We advertise the merchandise or the service we have for the sake of selling it with a profit. We want the sale and the profit today—or at any rate this year. Most of us rather overlook the by-product of "good will." We take that as a matter of course. We seldom realize that here is truly a case of the tail wagging the dog—of a part bigger than the whole. For the good will built by good advertising is worth more than all the direct results—more than the total cost.

Henry Ford is reputed to be the richest man in the world, yet he will now spend seven million dollars for advertising in a single year. That is the largest sum ever spent for the purpose in that time.

Why does he do it? So he may keep production up and price down. He will spend about one dollar out of each hundred dollars of the price of a car to make sure of sales enough to keep his plants busy. Cut his production in half and the cost of each car would jump.

That is the theory and practice of all good advertising. By insuring volume of sales, it cuts costs of production and selling.

If it were not for advertising we would pay much more for our motor cars, our baked beans, our radio sets and our soap. When we buy "advertised merchandise from merchants who advertise" we help to keep down the cost of living.

The School Doctor

From Hygeia.

"Well, Father, they've sent another notice about Charles from the school doctor. This time they say he's losing weight and very much undernourished. Last fall it was his tonsils. I can't understand why they won't let us bring up our family as we choose."

Probably many good citizens have felt this way; if they still do they should read the interview with Dr. H. G. Rowell in the November issue of Hygeia. After the interview Charles' father said: "Well, Mother, I see we were all wrong and hadn't really looked into the thing."

It is the business of the school doctor to look after school living conditions, heating, lighting, ventilation, to see that the desks are the right height and a multitude of other details. He watches for diseases like measles, mumps, diphtheria and scarlet fever, keeps track of the distribution of these diseases in the school district, and sees that your child is not exposed to contagion with skin troubles like itch, ringworm and lice.

Besides these more conspicuous troubles, he tries to discover less obvious conditions, such as chronic tonsilitis, before it is too late to remedy them without permanent bodily damage having been done. In addition he tries to teach the children how to live healthy lives. This sounds like a pretty useful program, doesn't it, and one that should have coöperation rather than knocks?

Just Folks

FOOTBALL.

Tackling high, and tackling low,
Twelve years old and ready to go
And his mother looks with a wistful eye
At the not far distant by-and-bye,
The dawn of the dangerous morning when
He'll go to the field with older men.

And the mother says, in a mother's way
"When he's older grown he will want to play,
And the game is rough and the players fall
And they never think of mothers at all;
They never think of our dread just then
And the fears that come when our boys are men."

What can I say and what can I do?
Time was I yearned for the scrimmage, too;
Time was I longed with an ardent soul
To battle my way to a far-flung goal
And I know I'd have joyed at a hurt back then
Just to take my place with the older men.

Oh, the game is rough, and so are the years,
And we all get hurt and we all shed tears,
We are all thrown hard by the hand of fate
And we all do things where the danger's great,
And a boy must learn—and 'tis well he can—
In the game of life to play the man.

POLITE LAWYER

Sometimes diplomacy defeats its own purpose, as in the case of the old fellow who was enthusiastic in praise of the busy lawyer from whose office he had just come after a purely social call.

"That fellow, for a busy man," he declared earnestly, "is one of the pleasantest chaps I ever did meet Why I dropped in on him just to pass the time o' day this mornin an I hadn't been chatting with him more than five minutes before he'd told me three times to come and see im again."

BOYS OF 1,400 YEARS AGO

Field Museum at Chicago Has Beautiful Chinese Painting Which Shows Youngsters at Play

In a room of Chinese art relics in the Field Museum of Natural History at Chicago hangs a curious, beautiful painting on silk, called A Hundred Boys at Play." It is a panel, many yards long which was made during the Sung period of Chinese history, about 1,400 years ago, by an artist named Su Hanchen

There you may see a hundred Chinese boys busily occupied with indoor and outdoor pastimes And from the expressions on their little painted faces it seems that they are about as boisterously happy at their play as boys of the present day The interesting part is to see that the games they played in China so long ago were the same sort that boys play now

Those boys even seemed to know a form of football for you see boys scrambling for a kicked ball Others are wrestling shooting at targets playing war and amusing themselves with fighting crickets Still others are engaged in less active sports such as playing chess riding hobby horses flying kites, dancing and playing the organ and lute

On one bank sits a boy with a fishing pole Across from him a Chinese friend has set up a store and is a merchant.

Disillusioned

She had come to New York to study art. She was only sixteen, and when she heard that her roommate was to be a Spanish girl she was thrilled She was vastly seeing life to be in New York and to have a romantic, ardent Spaniard for a roommate Perhaps she would even stab a lover or two

The Woman saw the young girl the other day

"And your roommate? Is she exciting" the Woman asked

"Exciting" sneered the girl, "anything, but! She practices scales so diligently I feel as though I'll go mad, and she's so proper and modest that she even wears high-necked and long-sleeved nightgowns made of thick cotton."—New York Sun and Globe.

Powdered "Pharaoh" Wanted.

Powdered "Pharaoh" was one of the sovereign remedies of medieval times It cured wounds It was made into salves and balsams It was swallowed as a physic It formed the basis of all the black arts

Othello's handkerchief owed its magic power to dyes made from mummified maidens' hearts The witches in "Macbeth" gave potency to their charmed brew by adding powdered mummy So much an extent was tomb-robbing carried on even in ancient times that mummies of the great kings were taken from their own tombs and hidden away in secret places, while proxies were left in their stead —Detroit News

CAUSED PANIC IN FRANCE

John Law's Mississippi Bubble Almost Bankrupted Nation—Died in Poverty.

John Law, who inflated the famous Mississippi Bubble, started on his career of crime by being sentenced to death for a murder committed during a duel fought in England He escaped to Holland where he drifted into employment of the Bank of Amsterdam a connection from which he collected sufficient capital to finance a campaign of gambling which netted him the enormous sum of £100,000

Law suggested to the Duke of Orleans regent for the young King Louis XV, the plan for the formation of a state bank with power to issue notes and accept deposits It was from the success of this that there arose the idea for the Mississippi company an organization designed to exploit the entire territory of Louisiana Shares in the company originally purchased for $500 rose to $18,000 But before many months had passed, people began to unload and soon the movement became a panic With financial ruin staring France in the face Law was forced to resign and to retire to Brussels

Ten years after the bursting of the most gigantic financial bubble in the history of the world Law died in comparative poverty in Venice—Detroit News

Simple and Smart Togs for Little Children

In days gone by every child was supposed to go through a period called the awkward age. In reality it was not an awkward age at all, but in those days mothers had not got beyond a certain stereotyped style of youthful dressing and did not understand the possibilities of that age between babyhood and subdeb.

Few things indicate more decidedly the progress of designing than the charming clothes created for the modern child. They are colorful and exquisite, simple and smart, and, above everything else, appropriate. Perhaps the most distinctive feature of these frocks and coats is their individuality.

It does not take long for a mother to decide just what particular color is becoming to her small daughter and whether her type calls for frills and ruffles or for an almost exaggerated slimness and lack of ornamentation.

As always, certain phases of grown-up fashions are repeated in miniature. There is, for instance, the sleeveless frock with its wide frill about the neck and the tight-waisted, full-skirted dress which delights the soul of its small owner because it is so like mother's.

Outdoor garments are made of soft, light-weight wools in tones which set off the lovely coloring of childhood. They have trimmings of fur that are suitable to the years of these small persons.

Rich Fabrics Are Used in New Evening Gowns

Gorgeous is the word that best describes the evening modes of the winter. It seems as if the creators of fabrics had surpassed their previous efforts and have given to us such stuffs "as dreams are made of." Rarely has color been handled with such consummate skill and the texture is something to marvel at. On the sheerest of chiffon backgrounds are woven marvelous patterns of metal threads or raised brocaded designs of velvet and chenille. Both Chinese and Persian colors and designs have been reproduced and for those of more conservative tastes there are conventional patterns of wonderful allure.

Metal fabrics, both plain and brocaded, are the medium through which many of the most exclusive houses have interpreted the mode for evening wear. Because of the extreme richness of the fabrics the lines are noticeably simple.

In fact, there is more than a suggestion of the medieval in the straight, unbroken line of some of the new frocks of metal brocade.

Interesting Features of Accepted Fashions

Salient points of the mode can now be summed up with a certain degree of assurance that the clothes we buy now will be in style for at least six months and what more can one desire?

There is, for instance, the question of skirts. These for day and street wear are fairly tight and therefore of necessity somewhat short. Evening frocks, if of the period type with wide, full skirts, are ankle length. If slim and straight they are not quite so long.

The long sleeve for day frocks is almost the rule, and while in many instances it is tight there seems to be a rapidly increasing tendency to feature the bell sleeve with an undersleeve of lingerie, lace or silk.

Blouses are loose, with a rather casual line, which ends somewhere from a few inches below the waistline to a point about at the knees.

The wide expanse of neck that has been such a dominant feature of the modes of the summer season has disappeared. Many women who go in for the most extreme styles have taken to high collars, but the general choice inclines toward the Chinese neck, with its straight, upstanding collar. It is extremely smart, but not always becoming.

The new three-quarter length coats have been enthusiastically received.

MOTHERS AND THEIR CHILDREN

Combing Curley-Head.

One Mother Says:

When I comb out my Little Sister's curls in the morning, we take turns saying Mother Goose rhymes, one for each curl. Her scalp is sensitive and the slightest pull brought protests, until we found this trick of taking her mind off the combing so that now she declares it "never pulls a bit."

Location of Fireplace an Important Feature

From an architectural viewpoint a fireplace chimney may be made much use of in ornamenting the outside of a home. It gives variety in spacing and style of decoration that architects have put to good use. As an exponent of the character of the inside of a house we could scarcely give passers-by a better impression than by this means.

If, on the other hand, one is willing to sacrifice this addition to the outside of his home, much may be gained on the inside by means of this sacrifice. By placing the chimney between walls an extra fireplace may be secured with but little additional cost. For instance, if the chimney is placed in the wall between the living room and the library an opening may be made from both of these rooms. In one home the chimney is utilized in four rooms.

In building fireplaces some general directions in regard to placing should be observed. If your room is quite large and the fireplace to be depended upon entirely for heating, the fireplace should be in the side of the room. If the room is narrow this would not be so well for the reason that one could not arrange the furniture advantageously and at the same time be comfortable himself. Everything would be too close to the fire.

If the shape of the room allows it, the fireplace should, for esthetic reasons, be so placed that it is in full view upon entering the room. A fireplace in a room is the dominant note in that room and must be accorded the place proper to its importance. Besides this, a room must not be furnished with its side to the arriving guests or members of the family. As the fireplace is the most important decorative unit of the room all the other pieces of furniture must be placed with this in mind.

Up to the Widow.

Speaking on the marriage laws at a meeting presided over by an archdeacon, a curate remarked that it was not generally known that a man could not marry his widow's cousin.

"Widow's sister, you mean," corrected the president.

"No," replied the youthful cleric, "I mean widow's cousin."

The archdeacon was on his feet in an instant. His law must not be challenged by a curate.

"I tell you," he said, "a man may marry his widow's cousin, but not his widow's sister. You must really allow me to know."

"But," persisted the curate, "how can a man do anything in the way of marrying when his wife is a widow?"

High School, planning to meet Monessen on Saturday, with workout regularly on a wet field this week in order to be accustomed to such conditions in case the weather is not clear for the game.

A number of window cards, announcing the game, have been posted in Monessen. Quite a delegation of river-town fans are coming here, mostly by automobile.

Monessen's victory over Monongahela City Saturday carries a lot of significance with it. The Mon City outfit had not been defeated up to the time of its game with the steel city lads.

Wally Schang Has "More Nerve Than Any Burglar"

"Sandow" Schang they call him—with the accent on the "Sand."

Meaning Walter, who catches for the Yankees. That's just one of the names. Indulgent but expressive ball-players refer to him as a tough bird, a fighting freak and as having "more nerve than a burglar."

Sometimes he's called worse than that, especially when he blocks off an ambitious base runner at the plate. Schang does that. He's not afraid of shoots, slams or spikes.

That's the reason why he caught two games on the last western trip of the Yankees with a cracked rib and the muscles torn from several others. Two assistant catchers were shot from under Miller Huggins, and Schang had to get in the game.

Nothing at all in Schang's life, says Ed Barrows, who used to be his manager in Boston. It seems that Walter got a bad break on the wrist one day, and they looked about for another catcher. None was in sight.

"Go ahead and catch," said Barrow. "You can do it. We'll have an X-ray taken tonight and see what's the matter."

So Schang caught. That night they took the X-ray. It showed no break then, but it did show one, knit and healed, of three months before.

Lack of Good Twirling Is Handicap to Speaker

Lack of good pitching prevented the Cleveland Indians from giving the New York Yankees a stiffer fight for the pennant this year. Knowing this, Manager Speaker and Owner Bernard are already building up their staff.

One youngster already receiving a tryout with the club is Jimmy Sullivan, obtained from Decatur in the Three-I league.

Sullivan has had a look at a big league job once before. He started with Baltimore and was sent to Moline for seasoning in 1921. The Athletic scouts figured he had the makings and so Connie Mack bought him from the Iowa club, only to send him to Portland.

Decatur obtained him in a trade with Portland last July and Sullivan won seven games and lost but three before the Indians grabbed him.

The Brooklyn club has another Johnson who can play the infield. His front name is William and he comes from St. Petersburg of the Florida State league.

Urban Faber of the Chicago White Sox is taking treatment from Boneseter Reese for his arm and on the result depends the fate of the veteran pitcher for next year.

The world champion horseshoe pitcher scored 46 ringers out of 58 pitches for an average of .793, which doubtless will provoke a new agitation against the lively horseshoe.

Adolfo Luque, the Cincinnati National's pitcher ace, has signed a contract to play next year with the Reds.

How many youngsters would like to have the batting averages of those two old decrepits, Tris Speaker and Ty Cobb?

TRAVIS JACKSON IS REMARKABLE PLAYER

Hugh Jennings Pays Compliment to Giant Rookie.

"Travis Jackson is the most remarkable young ball player developed in the majors this year."

There you have the opinion of Hughey Jennings, assistant to Manager John McGraw of the New York Giants. It is some compliment, coming from so able a critic as Jennings.

Travis Jackson is the young infielder who has proved such a valuable man for the New York Giants this year. To Jackson perhaps, more than any other player on the club, should go the honor of keeping the Giants in the race.

When Dave Bancroft, star shortstop of the Giants, was forced out of the lineup for over two months because of illness, it was figured the Giants were out of it. No position is harder to fill. To ask some youngster to plug up the gap made by the departure of a star like Bancroft from the lineup seemed to be asking too much.

Jackson stepped right in and filled the bill, despite the fact that he has had only about a year's experience in professional ball. While he didn't do as Bancroft would have done, still he played a great game for an untried recruit.

Since the return of Bancroft he has filled in at third for the ailing Groh, and has played second in a number of games. His work for the Giants in a pinch certainly bears out the nice things that Jennie's says about him.

Grover Cleveland Alexander, after a little hunting in Nebraska, will return to Chicago and try his hand in the life insurance business this winter.

Ouimet Has Come Close to Honors Many Times

Once more has Francis Ouimet tried and failed to annex the national amateur golf title. Once more has fate thrown a fickle smile at him and then walked off with a new love.

You'll recall that back in 1914 Ouimet, then a mere stripling, turned back the veteran Jerry Travers and won the amateur crown. His youth, his form, and his steady nerve gave every indication that more crowns were his. But he has never won the title since.

Once, in 1920, Ouimet threatened to the last day. He faced Chick Evans in the finals and fell only when Evans trotted the last 19 holes in 71.

Then, this year, he worked his way into the semi-finals only to fall before the masterful play of Max Marston.

Ouimet's main weakness seems to be lack of endurance. He has the skill, the courage, and a steady style, but he weakens at the closing holes. His direction becomes bad and he begins to lose strokes.

Montreal winter sports festival will extend from Jan. 19 to Feb. 23 next. Elaborate events will open and close the program.

126,000 Miles of Cloth for Cement Sacks

To keep cement moving from the mills to the many building jobs always under way, cement manufacturers require an astonishing quantity of sacks.

This year the industry has considerably more than 225,000,000 sacks. These represent enough cotton cloth to make a skirt for every woman and girl in the United States—126,000 miles of 30-inch fabric. Even a moderate sized mill which ships say 1,000,000 barrels a year must have 2,000,000 or so sacks.

When a customer returns a sack he gets credit for it, if it is usable or repairable. The convenient returnable sack means that each plant has to have large departments where men and women sew, sort, clean and count sacks continuously. This work alone costs the industry nearly $1,250,000 a year.

And cement manufacturers keep increasing their sack inventories so that they can ship promptly. Last year they purchased a total of more than 100,000,000 new cotton sacks. For replacements alone over 50,000,000 were needed; for increased supplies over 30,000,000. In addition over 18,000,000 paper bags were used representing 7,000,000 pounds of paper.

This problem of containers causes a large and steadily growing investment by the portland cement industry.

At the Theatres

The Paramount

"THE FAIR CHEAT"—The feature picture today and tomorrow at this theatre, presents Dorothy Mackaill and Wilfred Lytell in interesting roles.

The world of footlights is revealed truthfully for the first time in the history of motion pictures. Here are no Broadway rogues trying to seduce innocent maidens, or offering pretty girls fat contracts, with a strong string attached, the prevalent idea of stage life as conceived by the average layman. Here is a gay Broadway, a laughing Broadway, a charming and fascinating Broadway, but never a wicked Broadway!

Miss MacKaill, the charming English girl who won such an enviable place for herself on the American screen, essays the role of the daughter of wealth who is forced through circumstances over which she has no control, to earn her own living. She is young, pretty and talented, and the stage naturally suggests itself. So to the stage—and Broadway—she goes, and wins fame and fortune, and the man of her heart.

Friday and Saturday, "Riders of the Night" will be shown.

The Soisson

"THE BRASS BOTTLE," on view today at this theatre, presents a novel mixture of Arabian Nights entertainment and a modern English love story. Interpreted by an all star cast, including Harry Myers, Ernest Torrence, Charlotte Merriman and Barbara La Marr, the story revolves around the adventures of a struggling young architect who releases a genie from a brass bottle in which he has been confined for many thousand years. The genie in gratitude for his release showers the architect with favors which, owing to the circumstances and the change of customs during the period of the genie's imprisonment, prove embarrassing. The story is an extraordinary intermingling of modern London and King Solomon's court of six thousand years ago; the genie, with all his powers of materialization, accomplishes the seeming impossible with a wave of his hand, but unfortunately is unfamiliar with the needs of modern times. The story is one that can best be told by the marvels of photography. It is described as a delightfully refreshing tale with many a smile and all of the splendor of the days of old. In addition to the players already mentioned others prominent in the cast are Tully Marshall, Clarissa Selwyn, Ford Sterling, Aggie Herring and Ed Jobson.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday Douglas MacLain will appear in "A Man of Action."

The Orpheum

"TRIFLING WOMEN" — Showing today at this theatre, is a Metro attraction and is one of the best pictures shown at this theatre in months.

The story of "Trifling Women" was written and adapted by Mr. Ingram himself. It concerns a mysteriously fascinating siren, a crystal gazer—Zareda by name—who lures men on by her beauty. Father and son enter competition for her favors, and friends conspire against each other for her love. An illicit affair between the woman and her young suitor is brought to a terrible end when her husband discovers them in the embrace of each other. They are imprisoned in the Sorcerer's Tower, a weird room to which they have been led by a vision which Zareda saw. It is here, too, that the wronged husband meets his end, when the desire for revenge has been satisfied.

Players seen in earlier Ingram photoplays have the leading roles in "Trifling Women." Lewis Stone, Barbara La Marr, Ramon Novarro and Edward Connelly, all in "The Prisoner of Zenda," have important parts in this picture. Others are Pomeroy Cannon, Hughie Mack and Gene Ponyot.

Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Laurette Taylor will be seen in "Peg O' My Heart."

The Arcade

When the curtain rose on Peck's Bad Boy at the Arcade Theatre last night there was a big crowd present and when it went down at the conclusion of the final act it was a pleased and enthusiastic crowd that filed out of the popular playhouse. It was a real show that the audience had witnessed and it was an entertainment away above the ordinary and something entirely different from anything seen in the line of theatricals in a long time.

The title of the production was "Brides and Grooms" and it told a remarkable story, laughable in the extreme, of a marital mixup in which men members of the cast, through ludicrous mistakes, married their own grandmothers and sisters, cousins and aunts all became embroiled in the tangled family affairs.

The numerous specialities introduced in the production add greatly to the entertainment. Steve Berrian, blackface comedian, was a whole show in himself and Miss Belle Hayes made a remarkable hit in popular songs of the day. Henry Neiser, the "Human Spider," performed a wonderful feat and the famous Jazzy Saxe hand struck a popular chord. In fact the whole show was a winner and is one that is bound to please.

The same production will be given again today, matinee and night, the matinee starting at 2:30 and the night performance at 7:30.

The program will be changed in its entirety for Thursday when "Peck's Bad Boy" in tabloid form will be given. A special school children's matinee will be given Saturday at 2 o'clock.

UNITED STATES DIVORCE RATIO IS ONE TO SEVEN

Increase in Decrees and Decrease in Marriages Shown; State of Texas Takes Lead.

One divorce to 7.6 marriages in the United States last year is the record disclosed by the Washington census bureau's marriage and divorce survey, the first since 1916, when there was only one divorce to almost 9.3 marriages. There was one-fifth more divorces and one-fiftieth fewer marriages to 100,000 of population last year than in 1916. The statistics, which include figures for every state, were issued without comment.

There were 1,216,418 marriages recorded last year, while in 1916 there were 1,040,894, showing a numerical increase of 85,734. To every 100,000 population, however, there were only 1,083 marriages in 1922, as compared with 1,055 in 1916, a decrease of 2.08 per cent.

Maryland led in the marriage rate with 1,589 to 100,000 of population. Arkansas was second with 1,497, Florida third with 1,468, and Mississippi fourth with 1,454. North Dakota, with 575, had the lowest rate.

Divorces granted last year totaled 148,554 for the whole country, against 112,036 in 1916, an increase of 36,518. To each 100,000 of population there were 136 divorces last year, as compared with 112 in 1916, an increase of 21.4 per cent.

Texas led the country in the number of divorces in 1922 with 12,399, which was one-fifth of the number of marriages in that state. Illinois was second in the number of divorces, with 10,995; Ohio third, with 10,182, and California fourth, with 9,227.

South Carolina reported no divorces, as its laws permit none. The District of Columbia had the smallest number, 161, and the lowest rate for 100,000 population, with thirty-seven.

Nevada had the largest number of divorces to 100,000 population with 1,325 and the number of the marriages there was lower than the number of divorces, totaling 1,208 to 100,000 population. Oregon had the second largest number of divorces to 100,000 population, with 312; Oklahoma was third, with 282, and Texas fourth, with 269.

DRUG STORES BARBER SHOPS BEAUTY PARLORS

JOSEPH GREER and His DAUGHTER

by HENRY KITCHELL WEBSTER

COPYRIGHT by The BOBBS-MERRILL CO.

Margaret's flat had been a shock to her. She'd assumed that these people were rich. She wondered, uneasily, if her father had been taken in. Beatrice was the first of the guests to arrive, and during those first few minutes while they were alone she had the uncomfortable sense of being under examination, on trial—to have it decided whether she would do! The questions themselves were friendly enough. How did she amuse herself during the long hours her father spent at the office? (Margaret knew how long they were, because of her brother.) Had she any trouble finding her way about? Had she been shopping? Margaret would go with her if she liked, almost any day, and show her where—well, the right sort of things were to be found. One could waste a lot of time—as well as a lot of money—in a strange city making all those discoveries for oneself. No, there was no harm in the questions—only the girl's answers seemed, always, somehow, to give her away.

The arrival of the other guests didn't improve matters either. There were only two of them (it wasn't a party, Margaret explained), young girls of about her own age. After the buzzer had announced them in the vestibule, her hostess told her, swiftly, who they were. One was Dorothy Williamson, whose father had gone in with hers in the new flax business. She had got back, only the week before, from her school, Thornycroft, in the East. The other was her particular friend, Sylvia Stannard.

When a telephone call took their hostess out of the room, for quite a long while, the vacuum got higher than ever. They didn't talk about men at all even with this opportunity, and Beatrice's attempt to introduce the topic was, as her instinct had warned her it would be, a blank failure.

"I think Henry Craven's a peach!" Beatrice had volunteered, apropos of something that had been said about Margaret. "I had a lot of fun with him at dinner the other night." Then, uneasily aware that both the other girls were looking a bit blank, she added, "You know him, don't you?"

"Rather!" the Williamson girl answered. "He's my cousin. Yes, he's a lamb."

Beatrice flushed and looked away; it was as if a door had been shut in her face.

There broke over Beatrice a wave of something like homesickness. Home as I never been a place she'd consciously loved. She'd never found much safety or security in it; nor anything better than meager and unsatisfying spiritual life in the world that surrounded it. But its inhabitants and their codes and standards were, after all, familiar and intelligible to her. These people were aliens. They left her out, not so much from malice as from the lack of any connective medium. She glanced round, desperately, at the clock; it would be almost an hour before Burns would call for her with the car. Luckily, the other guests went earlier, and she experienced a certain relief at being left alone with Miss Craven.

Just as she was leaving, an invitation for a visit to the Cape Cod cottage was extended in a way to show that it was meant and must be, in some fashion, dealt with.

"He's My Cousin. Yes, He's a Lamb."

"Why, it's frightfully kind of you," Beatrice said. "I don't think father means me to go away again as soon as this— I've just come, you see. But I'll speak to him about it."

"Do!" said Margaret. "If he's going to be away himself any time this summer, up in the Northwest where they're building their flax factories, it might just fit in."

Beatrice awaited his return from the office that evening with an emotion that was more filial and domestic than anything she had felt toward him before. She'd hoped he would be early—something he'd said that morning had led her to think he might be—but the better part of an hour passed before she heard Anson letting him in, and by then she was on the verge of tears. Unluckily, too, he came to her full of something of his own. He was very jovial about it, whatever it was, and the hug and kiss he gave her, though vigorous and enthusiastic, lacked the tenderness she, for the first time, wanted. She released herself with a movement of petulance which caught his attention.

"What's the matter with you?" he asked. "Getting lonesome?

"I'll make it up to you now, though," he went on. "What can you think of that it would be fun to do? I guess we've seen most of the shows, but if you want to repeat on any of them, I'm game. And there's still time to go downtown to dinner. We won't stop to dress; you look great just as you are."

"You hate that red dress of mine—I know you do," she said. "I guess you're ashamed of me in it." Her voice broke over that and betrayed the fact that she was crying.

There was a long moment before he made any response at all. She had a sense of him, for she didn't turn to look, standing unnaturally still and not looking at her. Then, without warning, for he moved lightly and the rugs were soft, she felt his hands upon her. Of her weak resistance and her broken, "No, let me alone," he took no account at all, but picked her up bodily, carried her to his special big chair, and sat down in it with her in his lap.

"Put your head down," he said, in his vibrant voice, "and cry as long as you like. And then, when you're ready, tell me all about it."

She didn't want to cry any more—indeed, surprised at being taken up like that had checked her tears—but neither did she want to talk. She had, for just that moment, no sense of grievance, against him or against the world. Everything else was swallowed up in the sensation of his comprehensive embrace; nothing even remotely like that had, in the whole length of her memory, happened to her before. This didn't last long. Her consciousness, so deeply submerged in this new element, came floating to the surface again. She was aware of the prickle of his beard upon her wet face; she wondered if he was smiling.

"I expect it's just lonesomeness that made you feel that way," he said, and she noted, even then, something forced in his tone of reassurance, as if he were managing a small child. "You've been sitting around by yourself all day, with nothing to do and nobody to talk to. We'll have to tackle that problem somehow."

She told him, without raising her head, that this was a bad guess. It hadn't been an unoccupied day at all. She'd gone to a party.

"Margaret Craven's lunch," he said. "I know." (She was sure, though, that he'd forgotten all about it.) "But I guess you can feel lonesomer at a party than anywhere else, if things don't go just right. What went wrong this time?"

"Oh, nothing much," she said, over a catch that had come back into her breathing. She wished he wouldn't ask her questions; just go on, holding her still. She felt, from the movement of his beard, that he was smiling.

"Did you wear the wrong sort of hat?" he asked.

"I guess so," she agreed, dully. "She as good as told me so."

"Oh, d—n!" she heard Joe murmur. Then, with an edge in his voice, "You don't mean she was really—impolite to you, unfriendly?"

"Oh, no; she was all right," Beatrice told him. "She offered to take me shopping with her. Show me where I could get 'the right sort of things,' as if she could see plain enough mine weren't. I suppose that's what you think, too— I wish you would go shopping with me."

"What makes you think I know anything about women's clothes?" he demanded, but in a tone she recognized as not serious. It had a joke in it for his private enjoyment. Of course, he'd probably bought clothes for all sorts of women, but that wasn't the sort of thing he'd expect her to guess.

"You want to take up that offer of hers," he said, after a silence. "She's a mighty well-dressed woman herself, and she hasn't had much to do it on, I guess. I'm sure she meant it in a friendly way. And she could give you the right dope about lots of things."

"I don't care whether it's the right dope or not," she persisted. "I don't want her telling me what to wear. I want you to." She slipped her free arm round his massive shoulder. "Will you go shopping with me, Dad?" she said. "You'll know what you like anyhow, and that's all I care about."

He hugged her up tighter at that. "All right," he said, "it's a bargain. We'll go some day, the first chance we get." There was silence for a while after that, but he hadn't, as she hoped, done with the luncheon. "Did she have anything else to say?" he asked, and the girl perversely asked, "Who?"

"Why, Margaret Craven."

She thought he'd hesitated a little over the use of the name. "Oh, nothing much," she told him.

He waited for more; then he asked who else was at the party.

It wasn't a real party, she said. There were only two other girls besides herself. One of them was named Stannard—Sylvia Stannard;—she pretended to be crazy about farming. And the other was Dorothy Williamson.

"What's she like?" The question was asked on an different a note, with such an appearance of personal concern, that Beatrice sat erect and looked at him. "Why," he explained, "she's Williamson's daughter, that's gone into business with me. He's got a picture of her, a chalk, on the wall of his office. Very pretty girl, I'd have said from that. Anyhow, I'd like you to make friends with her."

"Well, I'm not likely to," she said. "She's a little up-stage and that's what she is. And she isn't pretty—that is, not very. I got enough of her today to last me a long time." She rose from his knees at that, and walked away, noting that he had made no effort to detain her.

"Look here, Trix," he said, at last, "we want to get things straight. Don't want to make any mistakes right at the start. I think it's a safe bet that that girl will treat you all right when she knows who you are—after her mother has had a talk with her, anyhow. And she probably is all right, though she may be a little high and mighty. They're all that, one way and another. But, with them, the point is, it isn't a bluff. They really are like that, not putting it on. They know they're solid, and they don't—give a d—n for anybody.

"Take those Williamsons: I didn't understand 'em till I saw where they lived. They've got one of the most beautiful places I ever saw, up at Lake Forest. Acres and acres of it—I don't know how big it is. And a house as big as a hotel. But it might be a five-room cottage for anything they care. They have things as they like; do and dress as they please. There's no one to tell 'em what they shall do or what they shan't.

"Well, we're going to be like that ourselves. We are now, only they haven't found it out, altogether. Some day we'll have a place like Williamson's. I'm not as rich as he is now, but I'm on the way to be. I expect there's some of them we'll find pretty dull and stuffy, but there're others that aren't. I've found that out already. On the whole, once they see we're inside the fence, they're a perfectly friendly lot. And as good a lot to settle down among as you'll find anywhere. Well, and that's what we're going to do when I've polished off this flax business."

The girl stirred impatiently. She was standing at the window, looking out over the lake where a bank of heavy clouds was coming up with a summer shower.

Her father rose and came toward her. "How does that strike you?" he asked.

"I suppose it's all right to settle down some time," she said. "Only that isn't what I'd hoped I'd do with you. I thought maybe we'd go off somewhere together, exploring like you used to. Down in South America. I found some letters once that you wrote mother. Long ago that was, when I was a little girl, but I've never forgotten the things you told about. She'd have hated it all, of course, but I'd love it. Riding over mountain-passes and crossing canyons on rope bridges. Finding out things; seeing things nobody else had seen. I wouldn't be afraid anywhere with you."

HEALTH FOR WORKING WOMEN

Let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Help You to Become Well.

Thousands of girls have to work in homes, offices, stores, mills or factories who are physically unfit for work, with often an aged or invalid father or mother dependent upon them for support. Standing all day week in and week out, or sitting in cramped positions a girl often contracts some deranged condition of her organic system which calls a halt to her progress and demands restoration to health before she can be of use to herself or anyone else.

For these distressing weaknesses and derangements these girls have found health to do their work in Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Brooklyn, N.Y.—"Like many girls, I had troubles every month," says Carolyne Mangels, "and they interfered with my work as I could never be sure of my time. My mother often suggested that I take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, but I never did until lately. I have had very good results, and am now a private secretary and do my work without missing a day. I recommend your medicine to every girl who speaks of having troubles like I have had."—CAROLYNE MANGELS, 407 14th St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

Office Worker Helped

Milwaukee, Wis.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine for three and a half years, and they have improved my health wonderfully. My mother also has taken the Vegetable Compound and we recommend it to our friends. I am working in an office now and can always do my work as I do not have the troubles I had at first. I read of your Vegetable Compound in the newspaper and you may use my letter in that way if you wish to do so."—ELEANOR SHEBLAK, 587 36th St., Milwaukee, Wis.

Pains and Headache

Webster, Mass.—"I was all run-down, had a bad complexion, and suffered with pains and backache, and was dizzy at times and felt weak. I worked in a mill and my girl chum told me about your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I am feeling much better since taking it."—MARY PLAZA, 13 West Street, Webster, Mass.

TRY SULPHUR ON AN ECZEMA SKIN

Cools Little and Overcomes Trouble Almost Over Night.

Any breaking out of the skin, even fiery, itching eczema, can be quickly overcome by applying Mentho-Sulphur, declares a noted skin specialist. Because of its germ destroying properties, this sulphur preparation instantly brings ease from skin irritation, soothes and heals the eczema right up and leaves the skin clear and smooth.

It seldom fails to relieve the torment without delay. Sufferers from skin trouble should obtain a small jar of Rowles Mentho-Sulphur from any good druggist and use it like cold cream.—Advertisement.

Rich Coat of Pile Fabric

High pile fabrics have a luxurious quality that charms the eye, and a light warm, soft touch that endears them to their wearers. They appear in many variations, in the new coats for winter, almost always accompanied by collar and cuffs, and sometimes trimmings, of fur. A rich example is pictured in dark brown with fox collar and cuffs. It fastens with a handsome clasp and is lined with plain crepe.

Why Not a Modern Car?

IF, in the purchase of an automobile, you do not obtain all the great constructive developments that have marked the industry's progress, you deny yourself and your family the full measure of pleasure and safety that every modern car should provide. When you buy a car you should get—

First: A motor with such an abundance of power that it rises supreme over every problem of driving. In the 1924 Chandler you get the famous and flawlessly smooth which is now generally accepted as having no peer in hill or traffic performance, regardless of price.

Second: You should get some type of transmission that makes it impossible for the least experienced driver to clash gears. In the 1924 Chandler you get the

which is opening a new driving era for thousands who have awaited the time when the terrors of gear shifting could be eliminated. Anyone who has used the old-fashioned gear shift lever can use it and make any speed change on the first trial.

Third: You should get a practically indestructible rear axle, for no car is stronger than its driving unit. In the 1924 Chandler you get whose superabundant margin of safety is proved by an unprecedented record; not a single breakage of any sort in two years.

Fourth: You should get brakes which assure perfect balance; which are neither too weak nor too drastic. In the 1924 Chandler you get consisting of, first, a splendidly efficient contracting system on the rear wheels; second, an automatically equalized emergency brake on the drive shaft; and finally, the important braking capacity developed by the new Traffic Transmission through its ability to engage a lower gear at any time on any hill.

The car you buy should be a modern car. We believe that due investigation will convince you that any car, regardless of price, cannot be modern if it lacks any one of these important features.

Drive the 1924 Chandler! Handle the delicately balanced steering wheel yourself! Take an hour to convince yourself that it is the car you want!

(The Traffic Transmission is built complete in the Chandler plant under Campbell patents)

Great Variety of New Fall Models

Dame Fashion Offers Many Numbers; Any Taste Can Be Satisfied.

That extremely useful and becoming "little black and white frock" is from all accounts the most favored Parisian creation of the moment, observes a fashion correspondent in the Wisconsin Sentinel. Its simplicity and practicality endear it at once to the woman of moderate income and good taste. Any number of quaint and unusual little touches are permissible so long as that simplicity is left intact, for this is the frock that is as much at home on the street as in the restaurant of a particularly smart hotel.

Another frock is of black satin, with a normal waistline, slightly circular skirt and long fitted sleeves. Its distinctive touch of white is in the three frills of plaited organdie which adorn the lower part of the sleeve. Each point is a fashion feature in itself.

Another model is of black flat crepe, the skirt is made with two uneven tiers and a straight hemline. The bodice is perfectly straight and belted low with a narrow belt of self material, and the smart collar and cuffs are of white organdie edged with footing and fastened with small crystal buttons.

Never were fabrics more beautiful than those which will be worn this season. The new weaves have arrived, a forecast of a generous mode that the fall trend of fashion brings—laces, velvets, twills, brocades, satins and plaided wool.

Serge occupies a cherished position but this season it is called "twill," under various names. A very fine grained twill is known as poudrette and closely resembles heavy twill. Chatmoon seems to be the favored fabric for dresses, both the plain coat dress and the more elaborately fitted trimmed and braided types. It is a fine cloth, ever so fine twill in navy, brown, black and gray.

Easy to Make Vanity Table for Your Room

When a woman has learned the secret of remodeling and redecorating her furniture, she can revel in fixing up her home to her heart's content. The vogue for hand painting a piece of furniture started by being a necessity, and has ended up by becoming a favorite pastime.

Nowadays, many women are even making their own furniture. One of the daintiest dressing tables imaginable can be made out of a big, ordinary packing box. Simply remove one side of the box, install a few shelves, glue some material over the whole thing and trim it with decorative ribbon. This may be done by crossing two six-inch bands of satin ribbon over the top, tying a bow on each corner and allowing streamers to hang to the floor. Edge the curtains gathered across the opening of the box with shirred ribbon. If contrasting colors are used, the effect will be still prettier. Violet and lemon yellow, for example, combine to make an exquisite boudoir color arrangement. Cover the wooden frame of an ordinary mirror with ribbon, suspend it over the displayed box with ribbon streamers and behold! you have a vanity table fit for a princess.

All of the toilet accessories on the table can also be ribbon trimmed. The most satisfactory way to put the material on the wooden box and the ribbon on the mirror and toilet articles is to use glue. The best quality of liquid glue is perfectly safe and is easier and quicker than sewing.

The Honest Neighbor.

At dusk a suburbanite headed sheepishly across to the next abode, called out the occupant and said: "Mr Wombat, I want to return your lawn mower."

Wombat declined to take it, whereupon the other man was much perturbed.

"I know I have kept it a long time," he murmured. "Pardon me and let me return it."

To which Wombat responded: "I must be honest with you. I had only one lawn mower and neighbors have already returned six."

Has Not Advanced.

"Maud says she is twenty-seven. That was the age she gave me several years ago."

"Yes; that's one thing that hasn't advanced."

Costume Slips Great Help to Dressmakers

Quite elaborate appearing negligees are evolved through the simple method of buying one of the lovely costume slips and draping over it a loose coat of chiffon or lace, which may be fur-trimmed. These costume slips are a great help to the home dressmaker, whether she be remaking a negligee, a new frock or altering a last year's dress.

There are particularly lovely slips of white lace and voile, with inset motifs of white lace. These are intended to be worn under a lace or chiffon dress or negligee. Several of the lace motifs are set into the front of the slip to give the effect of a panel, while other motifs are joined to form a deep yoke. The same model worked out in material suitable to wear under a more formal dress is of chiffon and gold lace.

For wear with coat dresses there are slips made like coats which fasten down the entire length of the front. These slips fasten with satin ribbons, run through a narrow insertion placed at a low waistline. A slip made on these lines is of pink net, trimmed with coral lace dyed in a matching shade. It is further ornamented with fine hand-tucking and embroidery done on the net. For dresses and negligees having scalloped hems there are slips cut in deep points and finished with embroidery or bound with self material.

Blue Promises to Be Popular Fall Color

Blue for wearing apparel gives every indication of unusual popularity during fall season. This popular color runs the chromatic scale from hedge sparrow's egg blue to a shade so deep as almost to be black, and finds its fullest expression in the three-piece suits and tailleurs which fashion has decreed for fall.

Compensation for the slightly shorter skirts of those costumes is afforded by the somewhat longer coats, the three-quarter length being especially emphasized by leading designers. Coat sleeves are for the most part narrow and straight and elaborate ornamentation has given way to narrow bands of fur, such as white rabbit, marabou, leopard and reindeer.

Indoor Ivy Boxes.

Painted tin boxes having a green lattice or trellis attached to the top are delightful when filled with growing ivy and placed against the wall. They come in several colors.
